Jenni Tree

BEd., MA, RFSA, Dip. Hom., (and others!)
Winston Churchill Travelling Fellowship
1983

Jenni Tree has degrees in English, Education, French, Art, and the equivalent in Homeopathy.

Jenni has practised homœopathy since 1983 and has been a curriculum lecturer in many UK homœopathic colleges.

Jenni has been invited to lecture in Finland, Sweden, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Australia, New Zealand, Egypt, USA.

Jenni Tree is a seminar opportunity not to be missed. Featuring bacteria and gases Jenni will share her extensive experience in an interactive way promoting an inspirational learning journey.

“A jaunt through the history of bacteria, from 4 billion years ago to the present. I'll look at the 'family relationships' of some bacteria - for example Neisseria includes not only Medorrhinum, but also a meningococcal bacterium which might be useful if the case looked like a skewed Medorrhinum case - one with more headaches than sexual symptoms etc.

My information is not just homeopathic, but also clinical. I am interested in the many different ways of case-taking: we should be able to make a good prescription with the information we have, whether it is simple observation, a Kentian-type case, one taken using Facial Analysis, or using the Bombay method, and even deeper, in tracking the Source Language of the case. I'll show how we can track a bacterial remedy [nosode] using these different methods.

I have found these questions fascinating, as they are the history of the human race - and our history is ever evolving of course. I still have more questions than answers. And I have a passion for all the minutiae of life, whether it be bugs or bacteria! ”

Jenni writes...

‘I live in a small village in Lincolnshire, population 200; flat agricultural and RAF country; however I luckily have a view of 20 miles. I like village life, dislike towns and cities except for the culture, and love the countryside, huge skies, massive landscapes. I feel really at home in the Indian Himalayas. They embrace the entire above including village life in an ancient way. Perhaps I should be a Tree remedy as I like to be rooted in one place, and stretching out to embrace many disciplines and interests, places and peoples. Homœopathy is a perfect foil for these longings.’

“I like to work in an interactive way, giving everybody a voice and a chance to question or to share a case of their own.”
Jenni Tree.
